China assaults Viet supply lines

NGKOK, Thailand (AP) — ese infantrymen and tanks ed into defense lines in Viet- s northeast corner in a two- ed assault that could cut off ands of Hanoi's troops from rein- ments and supplies, intelligence es in Bangkok and Peking repor- hursday.

overnment official in Peking said a is not yet satisfied it has ved the objective of its six-day- vasion.

e thing is that the Vietnamese feel our punishment," Japan's Kyodo news service quoted the unidentified official as saying.

Peking says the invasion was launched to retaliate for Vietnamese border provocations and "teach a lesson" to Hanoi.

Vietnam said fighting raged Thursday on battlefields all along the 450-mile Chinese-Vietnamese border, the Soviet news agency Tass reported.

In New York, the United States and three other Western nations called on the U.N. Security Council to meet to consider "the situation in Southeast Asia" — meaning both the Chinese invasion of Vietnam and the earlier Vietnamese invasion of Cambodia.

Tass charged in a report from Hanoi that the Chinese intend to annex Vietnamese border territory. Peking has said repeatedly it does not want any land, but some intelligence sources suggest the Chinese might hold on to some border districts to use as bargaining chips in eventual negotiations.

It appeared the Chinese were accomplishing one possible goal of their invasion — easing Vietnamese military pressure on the forces of the ousted pro-Chinese government in Cambodia.

Intelligence sources in Bangkok said 30,000 of the estimated 100,000 Vietnamese troops in Cambodia were ordered to return to Vietnam. New guerrilla offenses against the Vietnamese were reported in Cambodia Wednesday.

It was reported that two Soviet warships have left the Sea of Japan and apparently are en route to the south China Sea off Vietnam, the Pentagon said Thursday.

The intelligence sources said Hanoi also was calling home Vietnamese troops from northern Laos to reinforce defenses in the area of Lao Cai, a major communications and railway center that fell to the Chinese on Tuesday.

Radio Hanoi said 12,000 Chinese troops had been killed in the first five days of fighting. Analysts here consider those claims inflated and say the Vietnamese have suffered heavier casualties than the Chinese. It has been difficult to verify casualty figures independently.

The Hanoi broadcast, monitored in Bangkok, also claimed that 140 Chinese tanks, armored cars and military vehicles had been destroyed. The Peking media have had few reports on the war.

Information provided by Bangkok sources and Western military sources in Peking, quoted by Kyodo, indicated that the new Chinese attacks in the northeast were aimed at cutting off two highways linking the Vietnamese-held, front-line town of Lang Son with Hanoi and the seacoast.

The Vietnamese for the past few days have been sending regular army troops northward up Highway 1 to reinforce militiamen in Lang Son, 80 miles northeast of Hanoi and 12 miles south of the border.

The sources said the Chinese beefed up their forces dug in on hillsides around the town of Dong Dang, seven miles north of Lang Son and five miles south of the border, and on Wednesday opened a new assault, described by Peking sources as the heaviest fighting of the war thus far.

aiwan security oosted by bill

SHINGTON (AP) — The e Foreign Relations Committee unanimous approval Thursday Taiwan security" bill declaring ontinued U.S. recognition of the g government depends upon a ful approach by China towards n.

committee, by a 10-0 vote, ac- l compromise wording declaring a threatened attack by the and against Taiwan would be "of concern to the United States."

issue is expected to stir a fresh when the bill reaches the floor of enate.

ile the vote on the Taiwan dment was unanimous, a clearer tion of sentiment on the commit- me earlier on wording suggested n. Charles Percy, R-Ill.

Percy's proposal that a move against Taiwan be considered a threat against "the security interest of the United States" was rejected 11-4.

The wording approved by the committee had won the reluctant acceptance of President Carter, who announced last Dec. 15 that the United States would recognize Peking while cutting off diplomatic relations with Taiwan.

The compromise, worked out by Sen. Frank Church, the committee's chairman, and Jacob Javits, its senior Republican, struck a balance between those who believe no Taiwan legislation is necessary and others who sought specific guarantees of a U.S. military response to a Chinese threat to the island.

It's summer

Greenhouse thrives

By DAVID WEBB
Universe Staff Writer

It's summer in here. The temperature at this part of campus averages 70 degrees during the day, and at night drops all the way down to a chilly 60 degrees.

While snow falls all around us, the orchards are blooming inside the botany and horticulture greenhouse. The bananna palm has new banannas beginning to form and the orange trees are lush and green.

According to Howard L. Hansen, greenhouse manager, BYU has about 140,000 square feet of growing space under glass. "And, we still need more room," said Hansen. BYU maintains a greenhouse to provide plant materials for class study and to allow students and professors to engage in agriculture research, Hansen said.

The main purpose of the greenhouse is to provide plants for biology and agronomy classes. Students learn about various species of plants by studying their floral parts and physical structures. Hansen said they grow many common garden vegetables such as corn and peas, because they are representative of their species and easy to study.

"The common tobacco plant is one of the most versatile plants we raise for study," Hansen said. It is hardy and easy to grow. It has X and Y chromosomes similar to those in man and so it is very useful in genetic experiments. It is also useful for chloroplast extractions and photosynthesis studies.

Hansen said they have samples of plants from almost every kind of environment, ranging from tropical to desert to bog conditions. "We have a jungle section that looks like a real jungle."

The greenhouse has a special collection of "North American varieties of insectivorous," bug-eating plants that are native to the wet, warm climates of the southern United States. Hansen explained these plants hold a strange attraction for many people, and in fact, they have had trouble with people taking them. He warned that the carnivorous plants require a special environment to survive, and most of the stolen plants probably do not survive in people's homes. The insectivorous plants are housed within an enclosed glass structure to preserve their delicate environment.

Many BYU professors are involved in research projects using the greenhouse. Dr. Wilford M. Hess is studying the effect of virus on sweet potatoes and magnolia plants. Dr. Howard C. Stutz has done extensive genetic research and has developed some hardy strains of hybrid plants useful in restoring vegetation to land after it has been strip-mined and the natural soil conditions disturbed.

Dr. Glen Moore has spent years test crossing succulent plants, manipulating their form and function. "Succulent plants have some part, usually leaf or stem, thickened to store water," Moore said. The varities of cactus are examples of succulents. "I made my first test cross when I was 15 years old," Moore said. When asked the purpose of his research, he said: "No purpose, I'm just having fun. What more do you need?"

Moore said some of his hybrids might have a future as house plants, but they do not have much nutritional value and he likes it that way. "I hope they are all poisonous," he said because their only purpose should be to "delight the eye of man" and not be used as a food source. Moore has produced flowers with blossoms found nowhere but in the BYU greenhouse.

For Heritage Mountain:

City gives tax free bonds

By LARRY WERNER
Universe Staff Writer

The Heritage Mountain ski resort will receive a tax-exempt status in obtaining up to $30 million of industrial revenue bonds as a result of action taken by the Provo City Commission Thursday.

A letter of inducement signed in the city commission meeting will allow Wilderness Associates to use the city's tax-exempt status in obtaining the industrial revenue bonds, Provo Mayor James E. Ferguson said. Ferguson said such action is often taken by the city in an effort to induce corporations to locate in Provo.

"The letter of inducement indicates that the commission feels a corporation coming into the city will provide needed jobs or other benefits," he said. "Therefore we in essence lend the city's tax-exempt status to the development."

Ferguson stressed that in giving a letter of inducement the city will not be providing credit to Wilderness Associates nor making itself liable in case of default.

"The financial institution determines if the project is funded," he said. "If the project fails the recourse available to the purchasers of the bonds is to come back to the company's assets."

Gary Williamson, president of Wilderness Associates, said the action will give the company a substantial financial break.

"We're pleased that the city was willing to give us the same privilege as other corporations that it wants to locate in Provo," he said. "The letter of inducemennt will give us a 5 to 6 percent interest break in the bonding process."

Williamson also said the bonding house which is handling the package already has some prospective buyers.

"We anticipate that the final details of the bonding will be completed by spring," he added.

According to the resort developer, special provisions in the state's bonding law make the special industrial development bonds available to sports-related facilities.

Although the city approved the letter of inducement, there was some confusion before the final draft was signed. Originally, a letter of inducement drawn up by the developers was rejected by city officials because it didn't clearly exempt the city from legal action in case of default and it also inferred that the city was assuming the responsibility for developing the resort, Ferguson said.

After rejecting the original letter, the city drafted a letter similar to those being used for other corporations which have received similar city approval.

The commission meeting reconvened Thursday afternoon after the city's letter was completed, at which time the developers presented a second letter which they had drawn up. The city again rejected the second letter for similar reasons and finally approved the letter written by the city attorney.

Singers file suit in fatal shooting

By JOHN JESSE
Universe Staff Writer

Vickie Singer, the widow of slain polygamist John Singer, says she has filed a $5.6 million "wrongful death" claim against Utah and Summit County officials "not out of revenge but as an act to bring forth the truth and justice."

Singer was shot to death Jan. 18 in a confrontation with 10 law enforcement officers at his Marion, Utah, farm.

Stephen R. Gilliland, an attorney from Salt Lake City representing the Singer family, explained why Mrs. Singer changed her mind and decided to seek damages for the death of her husband: "Through prayer, Vickie determined she would not be getting in the way of the Lord's reason for John's death by this action," he said.

Gilliland said he filed notice of claim with Summit County, and the action eventually will include claims against Gov. Scott Matheson and the state of Utah. The lawyer added the state has 90 days to decide whether to pay or reject the claim. If rejected, as expected, Gilliland said he plans to file suit in state or federal court.

The attorney described the action as "a civil discovery suit" and will ask $700,000 in damages for each of the remaining eight members of the Singer family.

The demands do not include compensation for Shirley Black Singer who Gilliland said "does not have lawful standing to sue."

Mrs. Singer explained the reason for the suit. "The state has closed down the investigation," she said. "They said nothing had been done wrong, but people from all over the United States disagree...

"I'm the only person who can bring forth the wrongful action suit," she said. "People want to know the whole story. This is the only way it can happen."

Childrens' deaths studied

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Nineteen Southern Utah children died of leukemia in the 1950s who might not have died without nuclear bomb tests in Nevada, a Utah scientist said Thursday.

Dr. Joseph L. Lyon, reporting on a study published in the New England Journal of Medicine, said the work is the first scientific study to suggest a link between Nevada nuclear fallout and cancer. Lyon, co-director of the Utah Cancer Registry, and three other researchers conducted the study.

"There is a possible connection" between the fallout and the deaths, Lyon said, "But we cannot rule out the possiblity it's due to other things."

Saudi Arabia 'key' to oil prices

NEW YORK (AP) — A general rise in oil prices could be on the way if Saudi Arabia follows the United Arab Emirates in raising crude oil prices to take advantage of problems in Iran, oil analysts said Thursday.

So far, the Saudis have resisted calls by other nations to raise prices across the board. The Saudis have, however, increased the price on the extra crude oil they are producing above normal levels to meet the supply squeeze created by the cutoff of Iranian oil.

"Saudi Arabia's the key," said Gary Ross, an analyst with the Petroleum Industry Research Foundation.

Another expert, Arnold E. Safer of Irving Trust Co., said, "I think each country will do it on its own, but when the Saudis do it, that will be a signal for everyone else."

Aid to Afganistan to be cut

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter has ordered a substantial cut in U.S. aid to Afganistan, partly because of the slaying of U.S. Ambassador Adolph Dubs, a White House spokesman said Thursday.

"Certainly the decision does take into account circumstances surrounding the death of Mr. Dubs," press secretary Jody Powell told reporters.

The presidential spokesman said U.S. economic aid would be reduced from the current levels of $15 million in fiscal 1979 and $17 million in 1980. But Powell said he could not cite the new aid figure.

Killer says no demons involved

ATTICA, N.Y. (AP) — "Son of Sam" killer David R. Berkowitz said Thursday that his claims of demonic possession were a product of "my wild imagination."

"I feel at peace with myself," said the 25-year-old Yonkers, N.Y., man serving a 315-year prison term for murdering six young people and wounding seven others.

Berkowitz, in a free-wheeling interview with The Associated Press, The New York Times and Newsday, denied his previous tales of satanic possession contained in letters to police and others both before and after his guilty plea.

"There were no real demons, no talking dogs, no satanic henchmen," he said. "I made it all up via my wild imagination so as to find some form of justification for my criminal acts against society."

Mardi Gras parades cancelled

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Police escalated their six-day-old strike against the city Thursday, throwing up picket lines at fire stations and garbage depots. Sanitation workers refused to cross the lines and no garbage was picked up, but firefighters stayed on the job.

Officials of the firefighters' union, whose own contract with the city expires March 1, urged their men to continue performing their duties. Fire department officials said they had no reports of firemen walking off the job.

The police strike already had prompted cancellation of all Mardi Gras parades in the city, and a group of merchants announced Thursday it was suing the police union for $30 million in damages because of Carnival and Mardi Gras losses.

Relief to Utahns

GOP package passed

By WENDY OGATA
Universe Staff Writer

The GOP tax package which was passed in the State Senate Thursday gives tax relief to Utahns in the form of property tax refunds, estimated to total $74.1 million in the coming year.

To obtain their tax refunds, individuals will fill out applications included with the tax notices. Refund applications will also be available in local newspapers.

Besides providing property tax refunds to both homeowners and renters, the tax package eliminates the sales levy on groceries purchased with food stamps and exempts oxygen purchased for medical purposes from the sale and use tax.

Major objections were raised by Senate democrats against the property tax refunds. Since the beginning of this year's legislative session, democrats have repeatedly attempted to pass legislation which would have given Utah residents tax relief through total elimination of the state food sales tax.

One of the property tax relief bills was passed after a totally partisan vote, 19-10. Senate Minority Whip Karl G. Swan called the bill "a rich man's tax relief bill."

Swan's feelings were echoed by fellow democrat Darrell G. Renstrom, an Ogden senator. "This is a swimming pool and tennis court tax relief act," he said. Renstrom said he based his comment on figures showing that the individual who would benefit most from provisions in the bill would be the owner of a $200,000 home.

However, Senate Majority Leader Fred W. Finlinson, R-Murray, described the GOP tax plan as "a balanced package" which solves a number of different problems.

A bill prohibiting "blind bidding" by motion picture exhibitors was passed by a 44-29 vote in the House Thursday.

Blind bidding is a method by which theater owners contract for exhibition of a movie before its completion. Instead of having to view the film to find out its content, the theater owner may contract to exhibit a movie after reading a "bid sheet" describing the movie.

A supporter of the bill which originated in the Senate, Rep. Robert B. Sykes, R-Salt Lake, asserted that an individual cannot determine what kind of bu... it is by merely r... the bid.

Other represen... opposed the bill b... it would involve ... regulation of the ... picture industry.

Provo board upholds animal facility permit

The issuance of a building permit for the BYU Leo Ellsworth Livestock and Meat Center was upheld by the Provo City Board of Adjustment Thursday night.

While it seemed many of those in attendance were more concerned about ending the meeting quickly so they could attend the BYU/Wyoming basketball game, several residents of the surrounding area did voice their objections to the building.

Most of the citizens were more concerned about how increased odors and flies and a "slaughter-house" atmosphere might affect their property values than about the proposed building itself. "We couldn't sell our property now if we wanted to," said resident Catherine Johnson. "We're just trying to preserve the area we live in."

"Let's look at the issue being approached here," added Assistant City Attorney Richard D. Bradford. "The real question is: 'Is it, or is it not an educational facility?' If this is an educational facility, zoning is powerless to stop it."

Bradford encouraged the people to try to solve their problems by working through other avenues, such as the County Health Department or dealing directly with BYU.

Max V. Wallantine, BYU associate dean of the college of biological and agricultural sciences, told residents, "We will not expand our operation beyond that which has gone on for the past 21 years ... It is our intent to be better stewards and housekeepers with the new facility."

Citizens still opposed to the project can appeal the board's decision to Fourth District Court.

Mrs. Johnson, who filed the original appeal opposing the building permit, said she had not yet decided what her next course of action would be. "I'm going to sleep on it," she said.

Provo Canyon School

Official responds to charges

By KIM HANSEN
Universe Staff Writer

The allegations of the American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU) that Provo Canyon School officials violate the constitutional and civil rights of the school's students were answered Thursday in U.S. District Court in Salt Lake City.

Testifying before Judge Bruce Jenkins, the school's medical director, Dr. Robert H. Crist, said the rehabilitation of juveniles is an extremely complex business. "We go through a great deal of trial and error to come up with an effective program," he said.

One ACLU charge concerned the school's use of the "orientation unit," a locked area of the school where all new students are required to stay for at least 21 days after coming to the school.

Crist defended the practise, saying the orientation phase is an effort to get the boys under control. "Many of them have been out of control for months or even years," he said.

When asked if the orientation phase was therapeutically necessary, Crist replied, "Most of the boys would not remain at the school unless they were kept in the orientation unit. For the kind of juvenile we serve, I believe it is a vital part of our program."

The ACLU says students are forced to attend religious services after they have passed the orientation phase, and are prohibited from attending services during orientation. "This is a clear violation of the First Amendment right to freedom of religion," said ACLU attorney Kathryn Collard.

Crist said prior to the students' enrollment, parents are asked whether they want their sons to attend church services. "If the parents want the boy to go to church," Crist said, "they go to church."

Those who don't go to church attend a non-denominational character building class instead. "They are required to attend one or the other," Crist said. He confirmed that boys in the orientation phase are not allowed to attend church.

ROBERT S. ELLWOOD JR . . . some cults meet in "ceremonial magic temples" to "call up" spirits, deities.

Magic, strong values separate cult, religion

By SALLY VEACH
Universe Staff Writer

Cults are one of the two contrasting styles of religious life, said Robert S. Ellwood, Jr., Director of the East Asian Studies Center at the University of Southern California.

Ellwood spoke Thursday in the Main Ballroom, ELWC, at a lecture sponsored by the ASBYU Academics Office. He described one cult taking place in a "ceremonial magic temple" where rituals are performed to "call up" spirits of angels and deities. Members form a "magic circle" around a medium who received the spirit and gave messages from the spirit. Members of this group are usually individuals who consider themselves different from others in society, and participate in these rituals to express this difference outwardly.

Ellwood called the other style of religious life the "ordinary church or temple." The experiences are less intense than in cults, and this style does not depend on "magic." Values of family and community are supported, rather than intense inner experiences.

Ellwood said cults have a charismatic leader who can draw people to him. Their emphasis is on intense feelings and special techniques such as chanting and calling up spirits.

He said people in cults are led to think a certain way or are "brainwashed." People are brainwashed every day by such things as advertising and television. The difference with cults, Ellwood said, is that the brainwashing comes from only one source.

He said cults are appealing to some because of what they offer. "They offer a single, simple, sure truth and provide a way of life toward that single truth," Ellwood said.

"Cults are said to cut the individual off from families and society. Brainwashing prevents making independent judgments and members are under constant supervision," Ellwood said. "But this does not mean they are zombies and lack intelligence."

Ellwood said cults say something about our society.

"Cults show feeling is more important than reason and good thinking in our society," he said. "They represent an escape from responsibility for making truly free decisions. But they also show a willingness to look for ultimate meaning in spiritual reality and a continued faith in religion."

Ellwood said the future of these religious movements is uncertain.

"Religious movements that last and make a good contribution to society will show respect for open-minded learning, for personal development of members and for producing mature people who are able to make free decisions," he said.

ASBYU bylaws to clarify duties

Three revised Executive Council bylaws to the ASBYU constitution were approved Thursday at the council's weekly meeting.

The bylaws clarify responsibilities of the Academics, Cultural and Athletics Offices.

The bylaw amendments are "mostly additions" further defining the responsibilities of Executive Council members and their offices, according to Suzanne Van Leishout, ASBYU attorney general.

The bylaw changes for each office have been under revision for several weeks, and Thursday's voting was taken after having been postponed at the previous Executive Council meeting Feb. 15.

Some members of the council have been concerned at the slow pace with which the bylaw changes have been reviewed and approved. ASBYU President Perry Bratt said he hoped the council could complete and pass the revisions in time for the next administration to review before taking office.

ATLANTA (AP) — President Carter smiled when he saw his smiling portrait. He likes it, he says, because it's not all teeth.

The portrait, painted by artist Robert Templeton of Woodbury, Conn., was unveiled Tuesday at the state Capitol.

Carter, often characterized by his toothy smile, praised the portrait, which is commissioned to hang in the state Senate where he served from 1963 to 1967. Private donations paid the $4,500 cost of the painting, which shows Carter seated at a desk.

"You don't know how nice it is to see a portrait of you that isn't 80 percent teeth," Carter commented.

Cougars hold off Wyoming

By CARL HAUPT
Assistant Sports Editor

The Cougars kept their first place standing in the WAC intact Thursday night as they held on to a slim lead in the final minutes to take a 78-71 victory over the Wyoming Cowboys.

Freshman Fred Roberts came through in the clutch for the Cougars, scoring 26 points, 18 of those in the first half. BYU played much of the game without Danny Ainge, who tore an ankle ligament in the first half while attempting a shot from the baseline.

"We hope Danny can play against San Diego," said BYU coach Frank Arnold. "Right now it is a question mark."

The Cougars came out smoking to start the game. BYU rattled off eight straight points in the opening minutes, and although Wyoming managed to tie the game at 10 each, the Cats never let up on the Cowboys and took a 16 point lead at 41-25 when Ainge hit a jumper from the left side of the key.

The Cowboys managed to come back to within 10 points at the half and left the court trailing 47-37 at the intermission.

The second half saw the Cougars cool off from their 59 percent shooting of the first stanza. "I thought we were playing very well. We came out the second half and just stopped scoring," said Arnold.

Neither team scored during the first three minutes of the second half. BYU's Devin Durrant finally broke the ice with a jumper and after being fouled on the play, sank a free throw to put the Cougars out in front by 13.

Wyoming whittled away at the Cougars' lead and finally came to within one point, 60-59, with only six minutes remaining in the contest. But the Cowboys weren't able to get over the hump as Durrant made two layins and a freethrow and Scott Runia got a bucket of his own off a steal.

"The most pleasing thing was when our kids started playing with authority," said Arnold, referring to the Cougars' play when Wyoming came close to taking the lead. "Taylor was tough in the clutch," he said.

Arnold was also pleased with the play of Durrant. "Devin really asserted himself the last six minutes," he said.

The final moments of the game became a fouling contest as Wyoming's Doug Bessert and Taylor for BYU both fouled out of the game. There were 23 fouls called on Wyoming and 21 on BYU during the game. Postgame, Arnold remarked that it was a lot of fouls when "both teams played a zone defense."

Women's track team defends title Saturday

The Cougars will be to defend their BYU itational title when y host the fourth an- l Intermountain In- or women's track et in the Smith ldhouse Saturday.

Scheduled for a 9 a.m. rting time, BYU will host schools from the intermountain area, including Nevada-Las Vegas, Utah, Utah State, Weber State, Idaho State, Wyoming, Northern Colorado and Colorado State.

The meet, the only indoor women's competition slated for this season, has the makings of a strong field. Coach Nena Rey Hawkes expects many Fieldhouse records to fall.

Adding to the excitement of the meet will be the appearance of Las Vegas' Shelia Polk, who last week ran a time only two-tenths of a second off the 300 meters world indoor record in competition at Utah State. Cecelia Branch, a hurdler for UNLV, and New Zealand national pentathlon champion, and Karen Page of Utah State will add to a strong field of competitors.

BYU will not be without their own standouts in the meet. Hawkes is looking for strong performances from Pam Happy, Maria Garcia, Thais Zambrzycki, Stella Edwinson, Linda Bourn and Vivian Estes.

Another event expected to add to the excitement of the meet will be the two-mile relay team from Northern Colorado, which, according to Hawkes, is rated the best in the nation.

The Cougars edged out Nevada-Las Vegas in last year's invitational, 141-134, to win the team title.

Hawkes expects her team at full strength for the competition.

Donnie Owen, 158 pound wrestler, controls his opponent on the way to one of his 27 victories. Owen is favored to win the WAC title in his weight class this weekend at the WAC championships in Laramie.

Y wrestlers favored in WAC championship

The BYU wrestling team has almost completely recovered, and right in the nick of time, for the WAC wrestling championships begin tonight in Laramie, Wyo. The Cougars are the hands down favorites of WAC officials, but Cougar Coach Fred Davis is not as confident.

"All five teams have enough respectable wrestlers to win," he said. "If there is a favorite, it would have to be Colorado State." He mentioned that 158 pound Donnie Owen and 167 pound Brad Hansen are just recovering from elbow injuries and this will be a factor in the BYU results.

WAC officials don't see this as a hindrance to BYU chances, however. Hansen and Owen are ranked first in their weight classes, along with teammates Brad Anderson, 118 pounds; and Ed Maisey, 134 pounds. Davis feels that the Cougars will have to place everybody, however, to win the title.

The Cougars are undefeated in WAC dual matches, but when WAC competitors met in the Mountain Intercollegiate Wrestling Association Tournament in January, Colorado placed second to BYU's third and Wyoming's sixth. Davis sees this as an important indicator of team ability.

The Cougars do have several advantages, however, among them the only two defending champions in the tournament: Ed Maisey, ranked third in the nation with a 26-1 record, and Hansen, the two-time defending champ who is ranked second nationally and remains undefeated at 24-0.

The Cougars are the WAC defending champions, and only once in the WAC's 15 year history have the Cougars failed to be conference champions or runner-sup. "The year 1979 should be no different," said WAC officials.

The wrestlers themselves seem confident of this. "The kids are mentally ready to win and think they can do it." Davis said.

The Cougar roster will be completed by junior Scott Maynes, whose season record is 7-6 at 126; senior Craig Prete, 14-12-2 at 142; and Dennis Blackner who is 0-2 after limited varsity action at 150.

Also wrestling on the Cougar squad are 177 pound freshman Billy Boyd, who is 9-13-1 and 190 pound Scott Robinson, 9-18 in season action. Mel Maxwell, who spent the season recuperating from a knee operation, will represent the Cougars in the heavyweight division.

This year's championship meet will be the smallest WAC competition ever, with only five teams competing. Utah and the University of New Mexico are the other teams entered.

WAC track meet offers NCAA berth

The District Seven-WAC Indoor Track Championships scheduled for this weekend at Pocatello, Id., will enable several BYU athletes to qualify for the NCAA finals.

BYU coach Clarence Robison feels this weekend's meet is a chance for more Cougars to qualify, rather than an opportunity to challenge five-time defending champion, the University of Texas-El Paso.

"UTEP just has too many horses," Robison said, "but we will be able to score better than we did last year because we have better balance and most of the other schools in the conference are down."

Conference hurdles champion Lloyd Jones is running well for the Cougars at this piont, along with Rafael Echavarria and Alan Herbison.

All-American strength returning from last year is found in Kim Nielson, who placed fifth in the high jump at 7-2. And Robison sees Chris Child as a definite contender for first place in the pole vault. His official best of 16-9 is a foot better than any of this weekend's competition.

Y cagers to host Arizona

BYU's women's basketball team will have to withstand the pressure test once again this weekend, hosting Northern Arizona and Arizona State in crucial conference match-ups in the Smith Fieldhouse.

BYU, 7-2 in league play, enters the weekend in a tie with Weber State and Utah for third place in the standings behind unbeaten Colorado (9-0) and second place Wyoming (8-2).

Friday's Northern Arizona clash will be played at 4:30 p.m. The Saturday Arizona State matchup is slated to begin at 3:30 p.m.

Northern Arizona brings with them a 2-7 conference mark, while Arizona State sports a 4-4 league record coming into the weekend's play.

EDWARD L. KIMBALL . . . new position a chance to serve the public.

Y professor assigned to Utah parole board

By NANCY BENAC
Universe Staff Writer

Edward L. Kimball, a BYU law professor, has been named to the Utah State Board of Pardons.

Kimball said he was approached by the board approximately three weeks ago and asked if he was interested in holding the position. After indicating his willingness to serve, he was selected by the Board of Corrections Monday night.

"It's related to my profession because I teach criminal law, and it's also an opportunity to be of service to the public," he said. Kimball will begin his four-year term on March 1.

The board meets every week, hearing approximately 35 cases, and makes rulings on whether prisoners will be granted parole, he said.

Kimball said the prisoners themselves meet with the board and are allowed to make their position known before a decision is made. Others, such as the prosecuting and defending attorneys, the judge, and prison authorities, are allowed to make their feelings known by submitting written statements. "Prison authorities are a major source of information to us," he said.

Kimball said the board was forced to rule on the commutation of the Gary Gilmore sentence more than two years ago. "By refusing to commute his sentence, the board allowed the execution to go on," Kimball said.

The question of capital punishment may arise every few years, according to Kimball. Carrying out the death penalty is something he is "willing to see done" when the situation is one which warrants such a sentence.

He said he will always voice his opinions, whether or not they agree with those of the other two board members.

Kimball was born in Arizona. He is the son of President Spencer W. Kimball. He lived in Arizona until age 13 and attended high school and college in Utah. He was graduated from the University of Utah with a degree in history in 1953 and received his law degree there in 1955. He then did graduate work at the University of Pennsylvania before moving to Montana.

Kimball then taught at the University of Montana for five years and at the University of Wisconsin for 12 years. While in Wisconsin, he served on a special parole board for sex offenders from 1970 to 1973. He has been at BYU since the opening of the law school in 1973.

Kimball is the father of seven children, two of which attend BYU, and another two who attend Harvard. Three of his children are still in grade and high school, the youngest of which is 11 years old.

Kimball is currently serving as a counselor in the presidency of the BYU 10th Stake, under the direction of President George Pace. He has also held other church callings, such as high couselor, Stake Sunday School board member, counselor in a bishopric and bishop. He served a mission to the Netherlands.

Monday's eclipse can damage eyes

Serious, permanent eye damage can result from directly viewing the solar eclipse Monday, warned the Central Utah Optometric Association.

The solar eclipse will be total in most of Idaho, Montana, North Dakota, Oregon and Washington and partial over the rest of the continental United States. The eclipse will begin at 8:08 a.m. MST, reaching maximum at 9:15 a.m., and then ending at 10:29 a.m. During this event up to 90 percent of the moon's shadow will cover the sun in our area.

Dr. Richard S. Johns, president of the organization, said looking directly at an eclipse for as little as 10 seconds can permanently injure the eye. In 1970 two persons were totally blinded while viewing a total eclipse. Another 132 persons suffered permanent eye damage.

The sun's rays, when viewed directly, will burn a spot on the eye's retina, typically at the most important vision point, Johns said. This happens without pain. Symptoms of damage may not appear for several hours or days. The person suffers a permanent blind spot which eliminates the central point of vision.

This can occur at any time from looking directly at the sun, but usually the sun is so bright a person only glances at it directly for a fraction of a second, said Johns. During a solar elipse, the brightness is reduced.

"There is almost no safe way to directly view a solar eclipse," Johns said.

Convalescents plan rock 'n' roll contest

The Central Utah Convalescent Center in Orem will find out which residents can rock the longest in their rocking chairs and who can roll the farthest in their wheel chairs Saturday.

The "Rock 'n Roll Jamboree" highlights a fund drive, co-sponsored by The American Heart Association and the convalescent center.

Bob Talbot, service coordinator at the center, said he is not certain the drive will succeed. "Of the notices we've sent out, we haven't received too many responses," he said.

The public is invited to attend the activities at the convalescent center at 575 E. 1400 S. in Orem. Ribbon cutting for the "rocking and rolling" is scheduled from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. Included in the days activities will be an appearance at 11:30 a.m. by the Dee's Hamburger clown and a musical performance by the Jarnigan family at 1:30 p.m. Another musical group, Country Gold, will provide music for informal dancing.

A basketball signed by the BYU basketball team will be given away and silent, slapstick movies will be shown.

Other activities include a fishpond, crowning the center's oldest residents as king and queen, a bake sale, craft sales, the auctioning of a quilt, and a kissing booth.

The bake sale will be provided by BYU students; the crafts and quilt were made by residents of the center.

Starbuck to play Saturday night

...e soft rock sounds of "Starbuck" ...ll fill the Ballroom, ELWC, Satur... ...in a 9:30 p.m. pillow concert.

...e six member band came into the ...ic eye in 1976 with their hit single ...onlight Feels Right," and has been gaining popularity ever since, according to Russ Tanner, ASBYU social vice-president.

"Lucky Man", "I Got to Know", and "Everybody be Dancin' " are other top singles by the group, which got its start nearly a decade ago.

When the group's two principal players, Bruce Blackman and Bo Wagner, crossed paths while they were playing with separate bands on the same bill, they decided to combine talents and create "Starbuck."

...e popular soft-rock group "Starbuck" will be in con... ...t Saturday night for a pillow concert in the ELWC. ...e groups, which has had several hit singles, uses African instruments and xylophone besides guitars and drums.

Blackman, the groups's composer and producer, is a Southern gent from Mississippi. He began playing keyboards throughout the South for such notables as Charlie Rich, Roy Head, Lou Christie, and Billy Jo Royal after leaving his small town of Greenville.

Meanwhile, Wagner, on the other side of the country, began a show business career at the age of 5. A top stunt boy in Hollywood, and former Mouseketeer, Wagner also decided to follow his love for music.

He played percussion with Gene Parsons and Skip Battin of the Byrds, put a band together with Jim Seals of Seals and Crofts, and played with the Lewis and Clark Expedition.

"Starbuck" plays a "unique brand of southern rock 'n' roll," using African instruments, electric marimbas, and unusual percussion, Tanner said. "They are excellent musicians and always put on a very entertaining show."

"This year we're only having one performance because of the game, and we expect to sell out again," said Tanner.

Tickets, which may be purchased at the third floor ticket office, ELWC, are $3.00 and $3.50 for students, and $4.00 and $4.50 for non-students. Lower priced tickets are for mezzanine seating.

Friday Night Live tonight

Friday Night Live, the largest event held each semester in the Wilkinson Center, will take place again this Friday between 6 p.m. and 2 a.m., according to the ASBYU Organizations Office.

Many organizations on campus will have booths set up selling "all sorts of food," such as bagles, popcorn, Chinese food, and frozen bananas, Kelvyn H. Cullimore, Organizations Office executive assistant said.

Cosmo's Disco, sponsored by the Social Office, will be held all evening long.

Movies will also be shown throughout the evening. "The Great Race," and "Hot Rock," as well as several science fiction video tapes will be available for viewing, Cullimore said.

Mahonri the Magician will be performing between 8 and 9 p.m.

Carnival games such as a baseball toss and dart shooting will take place, along with a few computer games. A trout weight guessing contest sponsored by the fly fishing club is also scheduled, Cullimore said.

"Last semester nearly 7,000 people attended," Mark Kirkwood, Organizations Office vice president said. The purpose of Friday Nignt Live is "for clubs to raise money to sponsor their own activities," Kirkwood added. This activity is "open to the university community."

No cash transactions will take place at the booths. Instead there will be several locations throughout the Wilkinson Center where tickets may be purchased. Tickets will be priced from 5 cents to $1.

"Many problems of previous Friday Night Lives have been eliminated, problems such as confusing ticket sales and duplicate booths," Cullimore said. "With all the preparation that has gone into this Friday Night Live, it should be one of the best. This is the biggest event put on by the Organizations Office."

...isarmament maybe, ...rms limits for sure

...isarmament is probably not ...ible, but arms limitations are," ...ert S. Jordan, director of research ...the United Nations Institute for ...ning and Research, said Thursday ...lecture at BYU.

...rdan spoke on nuclear disarma...t and development in the BYU law ...ol as part of a lecture series on ...e Value of International Institu...s in a Nationalistic World."

...As states advance in overall ...ear industries, they advance to ...ear weapons," he said.

...here have been attempts to create ...ear free zones, Jordan added. For ...mple, military activity is ...ibited in Antarctica, but just a few ...dred miles to the north Chile and ...ntina are fighting on the tip of ...h America, Jordan said. "The ...er here is once they go that far ...h, they will keep going."

...peaking about conventional arms ...sfers, Jordan said, "Everyone preaches that arms should be increased ... They need to lay down a basic set of principles for this. Negotiations haven't gone very far."

Speaking of the "used car lot for nuclear weapons," Jordan said, "The market is so big and attractive, it's extremely hard to control through treaties and conventions."

The United Nations is trying to understand the basic problems of nuclear weapons to help it deal with conventional arms transfers, Jordan said. "The U.N. needs to develop the standards and principles which should be used for nuclear weapons.

"We live in a highly nationalistic world. Other nations become highly defensive when other nations try to tell them what their domestic priorities should be."

Jordan will give another lecture today entitled "Science and Technology for Development" from 10 to 11 a.m. in 303 JRCB.

...useum gets $35,000 gift ... set up endowment fund

...he BYU Monte L. Bean Life ...nces Museum has received a gift of ...000 from Max A. and Viva Beach ...ancho Mirage, Calif., according to ...ald T. Nelson, director of the ...elopment Office of the LDS ...rch.

...he gift will be used to establish the ... A. and Viva Beach Endowment ...d. Income from the fund will be ...to support the museum's research programs and mammal displays.

"We're very grateful for the Beach's generous gift," said Dr. Wilmer W. Tanner, director of the Bean Museum. "It will provide the means to care for and add to the museum's exhibits and collections."

Allocation of the income from the fund will be determined by the director of the museum, the museum committee and the university administration.

Patty to wed on April 1?

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Because they're "just a couple of young fools in love," Patty Hearst and her policeman-fiance Bernard Shaw probably will get married April 1, says Shaw.

Shaw made the comments after returning to work from a two-week vacation with Miss Hearst following her Feb. 1 prison release. He told a reporter the wedding site was not yet chosen, but likely will be a church.

OPINION—COMMENT

Unsigned editorials represent the position of the editorial board of the Daily Universe.

'Me first' attitude: source of problems

Caught between the pressures of inflation and the desire to keep up with the Joneses, members of today's society are becoming increasingly determined to "look out for number one."

Self-interest per se is not wrong, but when coupled with a willingness to step on everyone else, there is something seriously wrong.

This "me first" attitude can be seen across the nation today. In New Orleans, policemen have walked off the job without regard for the protection of the city. Dayton, Ohio, firemen recently left the city without fire protection during a strike. And some California farm workers refuse to work, even though crop losses are running into millions of dollars.

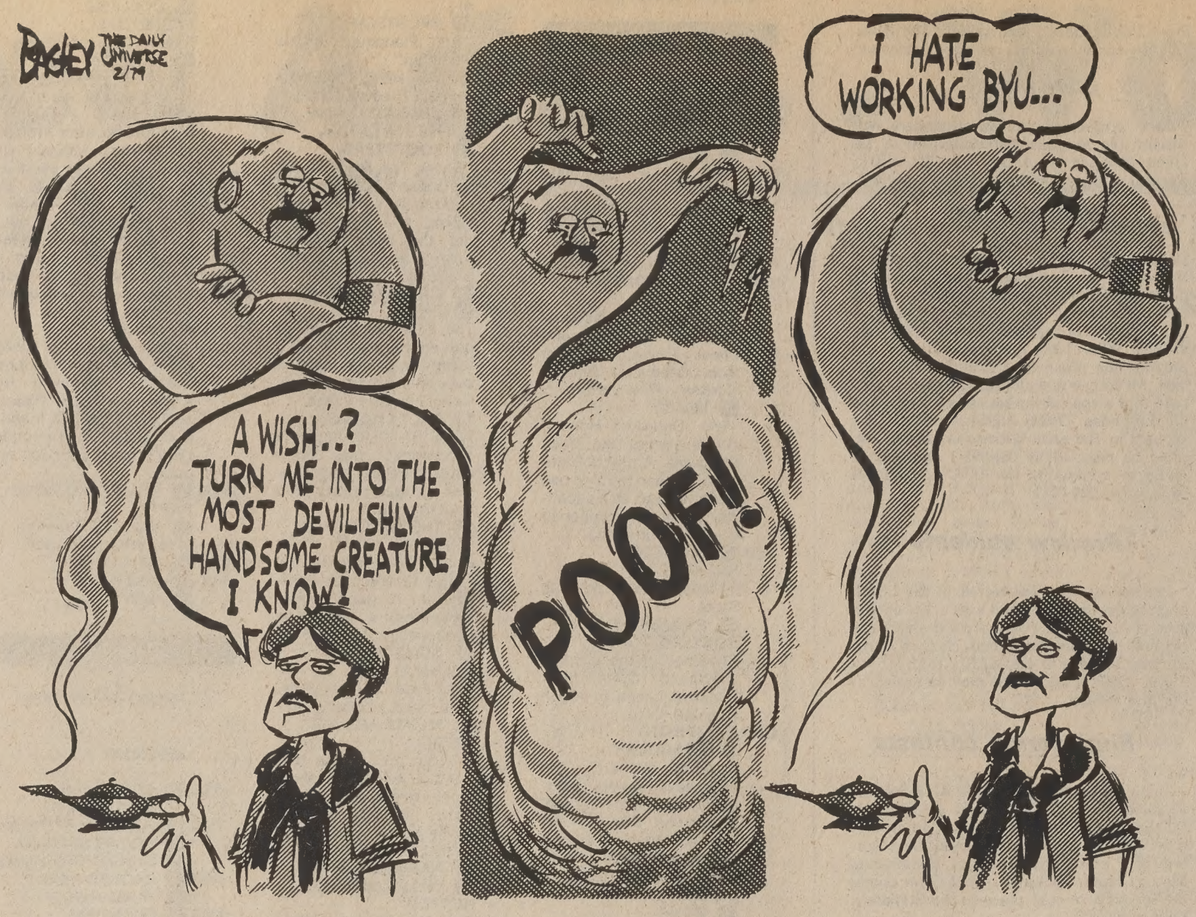
But the problem is not limited to labor. Business and government officials have a record of self-serving actions which caused the labor sector to suffer. And it goes beyond management-labor relations. It is an attitudinal trend in society: "the threat of self-centeredness gone amuck, of psychic insistence upon everyone doing his own thing, of everyone getting in touch with himself at the expense of getting in touch with anyone else," as Jeffrey R. Holland said in Tuesday's forum assembly.

In another forum, Dr. Mildred Jefferson stressed her belief that this "me first" attitude is the reason some women seek abortions. Holland echoed this belief in his speech and added divorce to the list.

The complexity of modern society makes the effects of economic and political selfishness just that much more evident. We are so interdependent in modern society that the demands of one stubborn group can affect the lives of an entire nation. The extended strike by coal miners last winter caused crippling energy shortages in some areas, but the strikers remained insensitive to the damaging effects of the walkout.

Britain is perhaps the best example of what can happen to a modern country. Hundreds of schools are closed, hospitals are operating at emergency-only levels, garbage is piling up in streets, and the transport system for commercial products is in chaos.

Of course, economic and political problems which stem from attitudes are not easily solved. First, groups which provide essential services must resist the temptation to use their service as a means to wring money from cities and countries. Eventually, we must all become willing to sometimes put the needs of other people before our own.



Commission system inadequate

The decision to create a mayor-council form of government in Salt Lake City, replacing the present commission form, will come before Salt Lake voters sometime in June. The recent "citygate" affair, in which two city commissioners made a power play to place the chief of police over the personnel department, is an excellent example of why a commission form of government for a city the size of Salt Lake is ineffective and susceptible to collusion.

Under a commission system, the legislative and administrative powers of government are invested in the same body. In the vast majority of cities with commissions, including Salt Lake, the mayor has no more power than any of the commissioners. Although it is possible for a mayor, through personality and ability to assume executive leadership, generally he is usually only a spokesman and ceremonial head of the commission.

The danger of the commission system lays in fusing administrative and legislative functions into one body, thus removing a separation of powers and checks and balances. It takes little imagination to wonder what might happen if the Congress or the President made law as well as administered it. The benefits of one body watching the actions of another are evident, even though they watch each other only to protect their own power interests.

Proponents of the commission system claim it represents more of a government by the people. In Salt Lake, Sheldon R. Brewster, head of the Citizen's Committee for the Protection of Property Rights, said, "I appreciate the opportunity to speak before five commissioners instead of one mayor."

A city commission may operate effectively in a smaller city where there are fewer competing interests, more acceptance of common public interest and less division over community policy. But when commissioners struggle for power among themselves or differ over policy, the commission soon lacks direction.

The Municipal Yearbook, a data book on American cities, discloses of 2,784 cities surveyed with populations greater than 5,000, only six percent had commission forms of government. Most large cities have abandoned the system because of inefficiency.

Opponents of the mayor-council system in Salt Lake will rally 'round the banner of anti-unification issue of the last election, claiming that the move to abolish the commission is only the first step in a plot. Although the mayor-council form has nothing to do with consolidation, that emotional issue may cloud the minds of the voters.

Hopefully, after careful study of the issue, Salt Lake residents will make a wise move and abolish the present system which will only lead to future citygates.

Abortion bi… tries to scar… not educat…

Abortion is a sensitive issue, especially in Utah. It's also a religious and personal issue.

An abortion bill passed by the … House of Representatives last … violates all of those values. It requires a woman to view "graphic material … possibly photographs of aborted … fants, no sooner than 24 hours before she makes a decision whether to … an abortion.

Presently, the bill is in the Senate Judiciary Committee, and will be placed on the Senate floor for debate reported favorably by the committee.

Only one representative voiced against the bill, which calls for a potential mother to hear in detail exactly what would happen to her child were aborted. Rep. Bev Whitehead, Tooele, called the bill "absolutely horrendous."

Why don't the representatives require every potential mother to … a 24-hour (or longer) film of exactly what labor is like, and later force her to see clips of what life with a newborn infant is like? It might scare some women away. Doesn't that achieve the same result?

How about requiring all of us to look at gory scenes of a head-on auto collision every time we start out on a family vacation?

The bill is an invasion of privacy … the heighth of sensationalism. Even … we believe abortion is wrong in the sight, we cannot take away a woman's ability to decide for herself, without being brainwashed, whether she will … to bear the child.

Invariably some women will go through with an abortion even when they see vivid portrayals of aborted fetuses. The display would merely produce and increase more and more guilt. How would we, or the legislature, benefit from that? The bill seems like a child, taunting that you'll be miserable if you don't do what it wants.

It's obvious by the house's 24-hour limit, that they plan only to frighten and intensify guilt in the woman immediately before her decision instead of educating or helping her. Their ideas may appear honorable, but their intentions certainly don't.

Instead of a guilt-producing sensational display, the state should incorporate a system of education programs and counseling. A system to help potential mothers decide for themselves the best alternatives for them, not just isolation and scare tactics.

New Watergate morality not found in Diggs' case

The public that was so irate during the Watergate scandal has apparently rolled over and gone back to sleep.

The Congress that launched a full scale investigation to rid the executive department of public officials we could not trust will not clean its own house.

In 1974, it was unthinkable to have a dishonest elected official. What is different about 1979?

Congressman Charles C. Diggs Jr. has been convicted on 29 counts of mail fraud and receiving salary kickbacks from his staff. The conviction carries a three year prison sentence for the Michigan Democrat, who was re-elected after his conviction and allowed to take his seat in the House.

The people of Michigan have forced on the American people a lawmaker who disobeyed laws already on the books.

In several professions, a person convicted of a felony would not be allowed to work because of the nature of the job. A convicted felon cannot be a policeman; he cannot be a prison guard. He should not be a congressman.

Michigan showed a lack of judgment in sending Diggs to Congress. And Congress has turned its back on the ethics it so stoicly waved before the public during the Watergate hearings.

House Majority Leader Jim Wright, D-Texas, maintains it is not the place of the House to expel Diggs. "The constituents are entitled to have the representatives of their own choice," he said.

But the House did not hesitate to prevent Adam Clayton Powell from taking his seat. It has the power to do the same to Diggs.

If Congress will not use its power and the people of Michigan will not use their vote to keep a convicted felon out of our lawmaking body, who will benefit? Charles Diggs Jr. And what is lost? The integrity once associated with American government.

There's something inconsistent about a nation that points an accusing finger one moment, and closes its eyes the next.

Hatch corrects quote

Editor:

On February 13, I was invited to speak at our great institution, Brigham Young University. At that time, I thought I made the comment that BYU is the greatest university in the world, bar none, because of its commitment to a total, all-around program for student development.

To be honest, I did say that when I entered law school in 1959, I was not as well prepared academically as the Ivy League students from Harvard, Princeton, and Yale. However, I also pointed out that, despite the slight disadvantage, BYU's teachings of discipline, moral principles, and work ethic enabled me, before long, to catch up with the Ivy League students, compete with them, and to bypass a great number of them.

If what I said was anything other than what I intended, or was misconstrued to be anything other than the above, then I deeply apologize to all of my friends at Brigham Young University.

There is no more vocal or active booster of BYU than I. As some of you probably know, two of my children who are old enough to attend college, and who could have gone anywhere they desired, have both chosen BYU. I will confess that from the earliest days of their lives, all of my children have worn BYU T-shirts and have been constantly indoctrinated about what I feel is the greatest university in the world.

I have great respect for all of the institutions of higher learning here in the State of Utah and likewise promote them whenever I can. But my feelings for my alma mater, Brigham Young University, cannot fully be explained because the deepest beliefs I hold sacred were augmented and obtained there.

Additionally, I owe this university the great debt of allowing me to meet my sweetheart and bride here.

I suppose those of us who choose public life deserve to have every word we say carefully scrutinized. That is only fair. I have learned my lesson the hard way on the effects of being misquoted in the media. I was deeply hurt, however, that anybody at BYU, knowing my devotion to our great university, would seize upon what may have been an unfortunate combination of words and attempt to denegrate my obvious feelings for this great school.

As you students graduate from BYU and enter your chosen vocations, you will also carry with you the traditions, honor, spiritual principles, associations, discipline, and all-around education that only BYU can give. If I am able to achieve any respect or success in life, I can attribute it to my parents, my belief in the gospel, and my education at Brigham Young University. I look upon these as the three most important influences in my life.

Joggers with taillights

Editor:

Before anyone takes to heart K. Gardner's suggestion that we all imagine ourselves as vehicles when running around the Smith Fieldhouse track — I hope all will consider the fact we're residing in the State of Utah. The carnage resultant from such imaginings would make "Holocaust" look like a Disney flick. Besides, taillights would be expensive to install, given available surgical techniques.

Come to think of it, from Kevin's discription of sudden lane changes, abrupt stops, speeding, traveling two and three abreast, and slow traffic in the fast lane; one can only conclude from the local freeways that people are pretending to be automobiles when they run around the track. All we need are chuckholes. Maybe if we all make car noises as we run ...

No simple compromise

Editor:

May I recommend Mr. Warnick read the Final Environmental Statement RARE II, (copies in HBLL), Draft Interim Management Policy and Guidelines for Wilderness Study Areas, Wilderness Inventory Handbook and the Myths in Wilderness Decision-Making by G.H. Stankey.

I too am worried about federal bureaucratic control of vast areas in our western states. However, after growing up in S.W. Montana and watching "local development," I do believe that some control is necessary.

The issues and answers do not make compromise as simplistic as Mr. Warnick implies. Since RARE II communication is nearly over, I do recommend that everyone examine this process during the Department of Interior's review of Wilderness Study Areas. The potential acreage here is more than under RARE II. The designation and subsequent control can be determined by local and state interests. The major criteria will be public interaction and the reasonableness of their suggestions.

Wilderness designation will have significant effects. RARE II specifically noted the social detriment to my home town. The answer is interaction by citizens and listening longer to ecologists and biologists instead of reactionary environmentalists or developers.

Wants better Y

Editor:

I suppose I must admit to being selfish at times, but then, who isn't? Selfishness is human nature. I would even say it's the driving force behind every action ever taken by man. Why do people desire the Celestial Kingdom? They WANT to be exalted and to be with Father in Heaven again, of course. Perhaps a better term would be: natural interest in one's own personal well-being.

In writing with respect to rude, unproductive, BYU employees, I felt a genuine problem existed that should be corrected to make the 'Y' better, for everyone.

What saddens me most, however, is that out of 25,000 plus students, not one responded to the issue. People care so little about things that they are reduced to petty, backbiting character analysis instead of real concern. It's sad to be called "selfish," when my intent was for a better BYU.

Defends Heritage planner

Editor:

Mr. Williamson (Heritage Mountain promoter) is a man who is taking on a mammoth task which has met with devastating opposition. Personally, I know that many (not all) of the arguments opposing the Heritage Mountain Resort Project have been based on unrelated and illogical foundations. I'm sure that we can all sympathize with someone who becomes defensive and upset upon hearing the restatement of an overused, unjustified argument. After all, how many missionaries would like to throttle … contact that ever said "Sorry, I … have time"?
